FIIG appoints R&D chief

Monday, 7 June 2010 12:30pm

FIIG Securities has appointed former St George Bank head of debt capital markets, Corey Wittenberg, as managing director - research and market development.

In his new role Corey will manage FIIG Securities' specialist fixed-income research team which produces investment research and market analysis for clients.

Corey has 25 years experience in Australian financial markets in a range of senior positions, most recently at St George Bank where he was head of debt capital markets.

He has also been head of distribution/syndication at Societe Generale Australia and director of financial markets at Merrill Lynch Australia.

FIIG Securities managing director Jim Stening said Corey's appointment was part of a company strategy to give FIIG clients an investment edge through first-class research.

FIIG Securities has a dedicated fixed income research team of five analysts which is separate from the management and sales functions of the company.

FIIG Securities Limited (Fixed Income Investment Group), which is licensed by the Australian Securities and Investment Commission (ASIC), is Australia's largest specialist fixed-income broker and provides direct access to fixed income investments.
